RE: Support for S.B. 324, Fostering A Smooth Transition for Graduation

We are writing to urge you to support Senate Bill 324, which passed unanimously out of the Pennsylvania Senate this past June. This bill will help youth who have experienced homelessness, foster care, or juvenile justice involvement to stay on track to graduate from high school.

Despite working hard, students who are experiencing homelessness, or who have experience in the foster care or juvenile justice systems, are at high risk of not graduating high school. These highly mobile students want to obtain a high school diploma, yet face an onslaught of unique challenges in doing so. They frequently have to change schools mid-term, and as such do not earn full academic credit for the schoolwork they successfully completed. Their course credits are often not properly documented, and their school records are often lost. Typically, courses students take in residential placements do not align with state standards or the home district's curricula. And, when students transition to a new school, there is usually no one designated to welcome them and help them navigate the difficult process of determining appropriate courses, getting connected to necessary services, and making a plan to ensure they can graduate on time despite the education interruptions they endured.

As Amber, a Youth Fostering Change Youth Advocate with Juvenile Law Center lamented, "I had a big problem with my credits not transferring during this time, and no one helped me track down my credits. No one could locate my credits from my last school." Qilah, a Juveniles for Justice Youth Advocate with Juvenile Law Center suggested, "I wish I had more support to prepare for college or had someone who could guarantee my educational transition would be successful."

S.B. 324 breaks down needless barriers and enables students to focus on their own school success. The bill creates a uniform statewide process to help youth who have experienced education instability through: graduation planning requirements; credit transfer, waiver, and make-up provisions; greater access to extra-curricular activities; and more flexible diploma options while still complying with rigorous statewide academic standards. Importantly, the bill directs schools to designate a point of contact with specific responsibilities designed to ease the student's transition to the new school and help the student graduate on time.

The below-signed are organizations and professionals dedicated to improving the lives of children who experience homelessness or are system involved, as well as individuals who have directly experienced these challenges. We urge you to support S.B. 324 to bring graduation within the reach of these students.
